Students as leading citizen scientists to tackle food waste in school canteens

Summary

The Museum of Food Waste aims to engage students in actively monitoring various forms of food waste in school canteens in the Neiva river mouth area, in Portugal, along with the co-creation of recommendations for interventions that can tackle this issue. The project is a continuation of a previous project with the same name which included food waste monitoring in school canteens but not through a citizen science approach, this time focusing / expanding on structuring processes, citizen science data collection, adding co-creation of food waste reduction strategies, and enlarging to 3 school canteens (instead , and with an increased duration (instead of 1 month).
